Not illustrated. 1890 Excerpt: . . . their Uncle Richard and his family, for he was then in business there. They returned about the middle of September, visiting their cousins of the Cornell blood at Kingston and at Arnoldton on their way to New York. SARAH M. CORNELL TO HER SON, F. J. M. C, AT ROCHESTER. Providence, 9th mo. 28th, 1851. Anna made a very short visit at Arnoldton. We do not expect to return to Rochester this Autumn. Alice says they enjoyed themselves every minute of the time they spent at Rochester, and when they left there were tearful eyes in the depot watching the cars move off, and aching hearts and tearful eyes in the cars. I expect to go to New York to-morrow, tho I have not heard from Anna since she wrote she and Grandmother were going in the country. It is quite uncertain when we shall make our home once more at Rochester-- hope next spring, but thy father likes being here so well that it is quite uncertain, unless the Committee should become dissatisfied with us and our management. Thou knows thy father does not like to be opposed in his plans, nor to have his judgment called in question. We have had much less difficulty with Committee, teachers, scholars and domestics than any Superintendents they have ever had before. 29th. --If the weather does not seem too unpleasant I expect to go to New York this evening, and shall probably stay till the last of...
