Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: .It appears from the Royalist report that the King s speech was delivered before he received any address of welcome from the county. It was no doubt intended to be in the nature of a manifesto to the country at large, and to be printed and circulated accordingly, and had therefore undergone careful preparation. It consists of a denunciation of the Militia Ordinance (to counteract the execution whereof was the occasion of his visit), an assurance, in which subsequent events proved him a bad prophet, that the county was not likely to be the seat of war, and an appreciation of his own Commission of Array; concluding with the formula adopted by both parties, viz: a solemn declaration of intention to advance the true Protestant religion, to preserve the laws of the land, and to defend the just privileges and freedom of Parliament, and his own life and crown. The Speech was read by Sir John Monson of South Carlton (the family not having yet removed to Burton), a lawyer distinguished for his legal knowledge and acumen, who had been made a Knight of the Bath by Charles on his coronation. Sir John was a favourite of the King, and is said always to have been consulted by him in cases of difficulty and moment, and who remained throughout faithfully attached to the fortunes of his royal patron. For which delinquency, however, he was later fined by the Parliamentary Compounders, 3,027, a sum afterwards reduced to,...
