Excerpt from The Substance of His House: Poems The Substance of His House. You say you do not love me any more; And so I may not hold your hand or kiss Your forehead as I used, for it is wrong To cling together after love is gone Except for one farewell and final kiss - I will not take it now but wait a while, Since one should never hurry on an end, For the end always hastens of itself; The things we know are temporal, and love - No matter, let us talk of something else. The days are growing shorter; we are done With the long summer-evenings and the dusk We thought was made especially for us. Noe after supper one can hardly see Across the narrow river to the marsh Where weep the willows and where moves the mist And where the weeds are trailing in the water; And soon the ghosts will go along the bank About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
